A brief thought experiment.

Eilish's Disorder.

Propose Eilish's Disorder, that people do the socially inappropriate behaviour of backflips.

Some say ED is seen with persons with pink hair, others say ED is seen in those with pink, orange, and yellow hair.

I think ED is only seen in those with pink hair.

A community of people forms around ED, with pink and say backflips are mainly done right before they go to sleep.

This community argues they should be platformed over other views on ED. Books, conferences, workshops and charities formed around in ED supporting views of those with pink, and saying backflips are only done before going to sleep.

Other topic experts, and research evidence suggest ED is also seen in those orange hair and yellow hair, and that the backflips can also be shown after waking up and before going to sleep.

Can anyone see any issues with how Eilish's Disorder with pink is being propagated and portrayed by me by pushing that ED is only seen in those with pink hair?

I suppose if I wanted to make this thought experiment even more obvious, I could make it I was only pursuing ED in those with blue hair instead of pink.

Thank you in advance.
